Are the coverage limits on my policy adequate?

To be fairly compensated when addressing a loss, it is important to insure your assets at their full value. Your agent is best able to advise you on your coverage needs and any additional coverage options available to you.

What information is typically used to rate my insurance policy?

There are many variables used to determine rates, including coverage limits and loss/claim history. Criteria used for automobile or home insurance include:

- Automobile: vehicle year/make and model, age and driving records, vehicle usage and territory where vehicle is kept.
- Home: age of home, type of construction, and location.

Are there discounts or credits available for my policy?

Vermont Mutual Insurance Group offers a variety of coverage discounts and credits. Discounts are offered when both the home and automobile coverage is insured with one of our companies. Discounts/credits are also available for loss free years, multiple vehicles, and safety/security equipment (airbags, anti-theft devices, etc.). Please contact your agent to find out if you qualify for discounts or credits.

Will a loss affect my insurance premium or my coverage?

A loss may result in a surcharge or removal of discounts for your home or automobile policy. For all insurance policies, a loss may prompt a review of your coverage or deductibles. It may also lead to an inspection of your property. Some losses could lead to the non-renewal of your policy. Please contact your agent for more information.

What could cause my insurance premium to increase?

There are many factors that could affect your premium. Some potential causes may include an accident or loss, a motor vehicle violation, a rate change, a change in your coverage limits, or a change in your insurance score. Conversely, you may be eligible for discounts that could reduce your premium. Please contact your agent for further information.

Will my auto policy cover me while driving in Canada?

Yes. If you plan to cross the border into Canada, you will need proof of insurance. If you have automobile coverage with us in ME, NH or VT, our automobile insurance cards are valid in Canada. If you have automobile coverage in MA, you will need to contact your agent to obtain a Canadian Insurance ID Card.

Does my coverage allow other people to drive my vehicle?

This may depend on the state in which you purchased your policy and other factors. For example, coverage may not apply when a driver is a member of your household but is not listed as a driver on the policy or an unlisted driver is using your vehicle on a regular basis. Please contact your agent for more information.

Does my auto policy cover a rental vehicle?

You may have some coverage under your policy. Please check with your agent for details.

What is a Personal Umbrella Liability policy, and should I purchase one?

An umbrella policy helps protect your assets further by providing an additional layer of coverage over and above your other policies for your home and automobile. You should contact your agent to discuss your own personal needs and to obtain a quote for this important coverage.

Should I maintain a home inventory?

A home inventory is a good idea. It can save you time in the event of a loss involving your personal contents. There are tools available that your agent can provide to you, but even a simple video or photos of the interior of your home will be helpful to you if you need to produce a list.
